關注事項 Major Concerns 2020/21

- To consolidate cross-curriculum and self-directed learning
- To help students develop positive well-being

A myriad of changes have been occurring in our rapidly changing environment. Despite our population share of just less than 0.1% of the world and 0.5% of China, the 7 million people of Hong Kong have been playing a far more significant role. Especially in the year 2020, the appearance of “Hong Kong” in newspapers and other forms of media worldwide has been very conspicuous and eye-catching. All of this attention on little Hong Kong, all 1,106 square kilometres of it.

The solution in such a situation that we have all been put into is to teach our children to be prepared for the ever-changing world so that they can handle the waves of change. The complexity of the world ahead of us is beyond our imagination and so are the skills required to survive, so the education our children need has to go beyond memorization of facts or rote learning. High-order problem solving skills that transcend disciplines and cross-curriculum must be explored. Receptive and reactive learning styles cannot guarantee the next generation a better future. They need to establish self-directed learning styles so that the right solutions can be developed at the right time.

A person cannot survive alone. We are social animals. Before bringing our communities together, we should learn how to share things with the people around us beyond our kinship, our neighbours, our classmates, our friends and even strangers. Our newly developed Student Attributes put much emphasis on other abilities besides knowledge and intellectual development. The word LOVER (please refer to the Student Handbook 2020 for details) itself was born of our desire to imprint our expectations for all-encompassing talents on all GleePathers.
